

Linda Armstead, MT, ASCP

Linda Armstead graduated from Morgan State University with a BS in Medical Technology. After working as an ACSP certified Medical Technologist, she next worked as a Medical Trainer for the Military, teaching the medical military team to use the electronic medical record system. Then went to the civilian sector teaching the EPIC Electronic Medical Records system to Providers, Surgeons and Technologists.

Linda is currently on disability due to her Sickle Cell Anemia. She joined the Armstead-Barnhill Foundation soon after its founding. Working on maintaining the donation records, mailings and obtaining promotional items. As a technical support director, she still maintains many of her early technical and administrative functions. Extending her functions to volunteering with SiNERGe (Sickle cell Improvement across the NorthEast ReGion through Education) and the ECHO (Extension for Community Healthcare Outcomes) projects to bring even more awareness of Sickle Cell Disease and the people affected by it.
